

WALKING THE TALK

I've always thought that honesty has to do with my relationship to others, and integrity has to do with my relationship to myself.

Integrity is the way you would live if no one was watching you. Or perhaps integrity is the way you would live if you were the only person on earth. People who have integrity walk their talk. They don't do something different because no one will know because there is always someone who will know-you will know and that is enough for you to live the highest and best you know.
